G'day from Grant

By now, I assume everyone has heard of the sport called pickleball. It's a sport that seems to be everywhere at the moment and, according to multiple sources, it's the fastest growing sport in the US. I've been playing pickleball for more than two years and just love it. I'm part of a local league, and when the weather turns cold in Colorado, we have permanent court time booked at a local indoor tennis facility. I can't miss getting my pickleball fix.

So what do I love about pickleball exactly? I love the relatively low barrier to entry to play... you can pick up a paddle and learn to play quickly! That makes the sport more social and opens up play to a much larger audience. I also love the speed of pickleball. It's fast and furious!

I think the success of pickleball really comes down to this concept of "speed." Speed to market, speed of learning the sport and overall speed of play. In a business sense, speed is also a concept that we live and breathe at Learning Advantage every day.

From a product development perspective, we are extremely nimble and quick to market. We constantly look around for inspiration and learn what the market wants... fast. And, perhaps most importantly, we play fast. We execute our product development process with efficiency.

Last year, I mentioned we were building an incredible brand called Spark & Wow and said to watch this space. We've added 21 products to that range this year and have double that amount in the pipeline. Spark & Wow is here to stay, and we are developing this brand at a rapid pace.

So come join me in building the Spark & Wow range. And why not also try your hand at Pickleball?

Even my daughter, Poppy, who just turned two, has added the word "pickleball" to her vocabulary. She talks about it nearly every day. Although, I think she has it confused with playing "peekaboo" because she covers her eyes when I talk about dinking or keeping out of the kitchen. Either way, if a two-year-old is talking about it, then it must be a success.

I wish all of you and your businesses the very best.

Cheers,

President & CEO
