G'day from Grant

As I sit here and type my seventh “G'day”, I can't help but think about how apt that word is. I originally used it to pay homage to my nationality and to bring a little bit of Australia to the US and Learning Advantage.

This year, that word hits closer to home than ever before. I've brought Learning Advantage to Australia. Along with my wife, three kids and dog, I've returned to Australia to live and now run Learning Advantage remotely. It wasn't an easy decision. But ultimately, we chose to relocate to live closer to family.

My wife, father and I regularly return to Fort Collins, CO to work and spend time with staff. From Newcastle, Australia, we work early in the mornings, on weekends and sometimes, late at night, to ensure distance isn't a barrier. I haven't written this to beat my chest. I've written it to give context about another step in the evolution of Learning Advantage. And we love it!

I've long viewed the company as having the capabilities to expand beyond the US anyway. We have a team of talented people, plus the products, systems and technology in place to scale.

So this year, Learning Advantage took another evolutionary step. We acquired a business in the UK called Anthony Peters. Who or what is Anthony Peters? In very brief terms, Anthony Peters is a UK version of Learning Advantage. Except that it has a greater global reach through a manufacturing base and product sourcing team located in Asia.

Learning Advantage already sources from and sells a significant number of Anthony Peters' products. So, there is real business synergy between the two companies. Plus, with its product sourcing capabilities, we'll be able to offer an even broader product range to our customers and continue to grow our brands on the world stage.

And what a year our brands have had! We have successfully launched new brand identities for Learning Advantage, Spark & Wow and Ready 2 Learn. We're confident these new brand identities will stand the tests of time and geography! Check out our new logos, colors and brand direction on the following pages.

Learning Advantage continues to have its roots firmly in US soil and we are so proud of the company you have helped us build. It's time to show the world what Learning Advantage is made of: talented, hard-working staff; scalable systems; innovative products; a commitment to evolution; and a slang-talking Aussie bloke who is deeply passionate about the business.

Cheers,

President & CEO
